THE CHRISTMAS STORM.

TERIBLE RAINS AND BIG LOSSES.

The Worst Night Within the Memory of Cincinnati's Oldest Inhabitants.

Property Damaged, and Many Persons Injured.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 20.—The severest storm ever known in the history of this city started in with snow at six A. M. Saturday and continued falling unabated until four Sunday morning, covering the ground to the depth of two feet. Several hours later a heavy rain set in, which has continued incessantly, with no sign of abatement. Over five inches of rain have fallen, and this large amount of water, together with the two feet of snow, that is fast, letting go under the rising temperature and warm rain, has placed the streets in an inscrutable and impassable condition. In many of the streets the sewers are stopped up causing the water to accumulate to the depth of several feet or more, flooding cellars and in many low spots even covering ground floors of residences and business houses. Street car and other travel is generally suspended, livemen refusing to even eumerous figures to allow their horses and vehicles to go out. Telegraph and telephonic communication is badly interrupted in all directions, this, with other complications, making it impossible to gather a complete report of the actual damage being done. The gravest fears are entertained of a most destructive flood along the Ohio Valley. Steamboaters are busy moving their steamers and barges to places of safety, and merchants along the river are greatly alarmed on account of reports received from the Licking and other streams above and below, showing them to be rising very rapidly and throwing out immense volumes of water. Should this prove true, as well as the reports from head waters of a heavy rise, there remain no doubt that the towns and cities along the Ohio will receive a revisitation of the great flood of February last, which caused untold loss and suffering. Trains on all the roads are arriving from forty to ten hours late in consequence of the snow and rain storm, but no accidents have as yet been reported. The engineers on all outgoing trains have been cautioned to look out for bridges and other dangerous spots where wash-outs are liable to occur. Reports from Newport, Ky., opposite the city, on the banks of the Licking, say several small bridges are washed away.

Besides the extreme darkness prevailing Sunday night, a very heavy fog also settled down over the city, making it impossible to see objects more than ten feet distant.

Nearly thirty persons have been reported more or less injured in the past twenty-four hours by falls received while walking on the slippery pavement and sidewalk. Performances at the different theaters, which are usually crowded Sunday nights, were abandoned, and no persons ventured out of doors that were not compelled to do so to fulfill their business vocation. Reports received from points along the Ohio Valley, in Kentucky, Indiana, and Ohio, as well as many places in the interior of Ohio, state that the storm is prevailing there with more or less severity during the past forty-eight hours, and that great damage has been done. At midnight the falling in of the roofs of the Public Library, and several other large buildings, in different parts of the city, was reported.

CREMATIONISTS ABROAD.

How the Furnace Was Prepared and the Process of the Operation.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—The first full Masonic funeral ceremony that has occurred in England for nearly a century took place at Mansfield, near Stourminster Newton, Dorset, last week, when the remains of the late Captain Blanham were deposited in the family mausoleum to await the cremation he himself in his will provided for. The invocations were read and addresses delivered by Provincial Grand Master Montague Guest, M. P. There was a very large attendance of Masons and the public generally.

The body was cremated at Mansfield, in the furnace, or "cremator," built closely to the deceased's house, on the banks of the river Stour, partially from the designs of Captain Blanham, in whose lifetime, the building was commenced. When the late Mrs. Blanham, the wife of the deceased, was cremated, more than a year ago, a great deal of iron was used in the furnace, but, on account of the warping and partial fusion on that occasion, metal was in the present proceedings only employed where absolutely necessary. The masonry of the furnace is very solid, the exterior being of common brick, and all the parts exposed to the flames being of fire-brick. The place in which the coffin was deposited was some four or five feet from the base of the brickwork, and in the clear was seven feet long by two feet six inches wide. The coffin rested on fire-brick bars ten inches thick and nine and one-half inches apart. These bars had sloping sides, down which the bones and remains fell on the fire-brick plates or pockets. These plates, situated in a central fire, to the side of the brickwork, and were so arranged that although the fire could play all round the coffin, not a particle of the other or other burnt remains of the body could escape. The height of the recess containing the coffin was twenty feet, three inches from the arched roof to the bars, before mentioned, and in the roof were three apertures, having a chamber from which the smoke escaped in a low, square chimney. There were four peep-holes ranged at intervals round the recess, so that the medical men could, when necessary, watch the process. The brickwork at the back of the recess was twenty-two inches thick, and in the front fourteen inches. A short distance above and below, the coffin-chamber the brickwork was strengthened by thick angle-shaped iron. There were three fire boxes a short distance from the ground, the ash-pans of which were level with the ground.

The coffin, which had been placed in the mausoleum near the house, with Masonic ceremonies during the afternoon, was removed to the "cremator" soon after 7 o'clock in the evening; and, having been placed in position under the directions of Dr. Comyns Leach, the front of the chamber was closed with thick fire-brick slabs or doors, which, together with the pegholes before mentioned, were made air-tight with mortar.

Everything having been got ready, the fires were lighted at exactly twenty minutes to eight, in the presence of Mr. J. C. S. Comyns Leach, of Stourminster Newton; Dr. Comyns Leach, of Stourminster Newton; Mr. Montague Guest, Member of Parliament, Dr. J. L. Hanbury, Mr. Bennett Stanford, Dr. C. Parkinson, of Wimborne, Dr. T. E. Budson, of Wimborne, and a few privileged friends of the deceased. The intense volume of smoke which followed the immediate flames from the top of the chimney, spreading a glare around which could be seen for a considerable distance.

The flames, however, at no time reached a very high height owing to excellent arrangements made for integral combustion.

The best forest of Dean coal was used, and in a very short time the thick fire-brick slabs in front of the coffin-chamber were red hot. At twenty minutes to ten the peep-holes were opened alternately by Dr. Comyns Leach, who pronounced cremation over, then to have been to all practical purposes completed. Nothing of the coffin remained excepting the handles and screws, and small pieces of white-hot charcoal. The slab separated from the wall of the oven, the older brother called the younger a "vile name." John at that time was in an adjoining room; he restored, and the older brother entered where he was. Gustav, aged twenty, is a blacksmith working at the factory. The brothers had a quarrel about business matters, and during the war of words, the older called the younger a "vile name." John at that time was in an adjoining room; he restored, and the older brother entered where he was. Gustav raised his fist strike when John drew a thirty-two caliber revolver and fired, shooting Gustav through the heart. Mrs. Schopchen entered the room just as the shot was fired.

The murderer rushed into the other room pointing the revolver. He was disarmed after a struggle by John Lightbender, of San Francisco, and proceeded to police headquarters, where he was locked up. Mrs. Thirs, the mother of the Schopchens, was found at the scene of the tragedy. The poor old woman was in terrible agony. She became hysterical, and threw herself upon the bloody corpse and kissed it, hugged it, exclaiming, "Oh! my God, mein Gott! my poor, good boy!" She took the body in her arms, while the blood flowed from the gaping wound in his breast, staining her silvery hair with dark blotches. The mother's lips were even dabbled with blood, as she pressed them again and again to the face of her dead boy, moaning out her agony. The crimson stains grew larger on her breast as she held the dead youth closely to her, rocking him to and fro and calling him tenderly by name. A little pool of sticky, clotted blood formed in her lap, and her fingers, nimble, wandering about, were closely stuck together with the oozing fluid. The corpse grew cold in her arms, and she begged and pleaded that she be not separated from her boy. "I see I was heartrending. It took two officers to tear her from the murdered boy. Oliver Boylan found the revolver concealed under the bed. The Schopchens and John Lightbender were detained at police headquarters as witnesses.

THE St. Louis grand jury failed to find any evidence or collusion on the part of the Governor and the gamblers, or of any concerted scheme by the Police Commissioners to use the police for illegal purposes. But they add that the indignation of the community over some of the appointments is not unreasonable, and recommend the organization of the Police Board on a different plan.

GEN. PRYOR received for his services in defending O'Donnell £3,000. A small unexpected balance of the fund goes to O'Donnell's deserted wife. There was a strong feeling in the American colonies in London and Paris adverse to the interference of the United States Government in the case. The absurdity of the claim of double nationality is declared to have never been more strikingly illustrated than in the appeal on behalf of O'Donnell.

THE labor agitation in England and France continues. Forty thousand looms are idle in England, and the strike is likely to include all the mills. In Yorkshire the miners are demanding an increase of wages, and there will be a conference this week to arrange for a general strike of miners if their demands are not granted. In the North of France iron manufacturers are trying to reduce wages and strikes are occurring. Many furnaces have blown out.

Mrs. HORN WINN, of Washington, is the agent in this county for Mrs. Owens' Cook Book, one of the best books of the kind published. We have examined the book carefully and are able to say that it is a very useful work, and is a desirable addition to the household library, especially as the recipes given are on an economical basis, and call for nothing but what is conveniently at hand. A number of the recipes have been tried in the household of the writer, who takes pleasure in giving a warm approval to the book. It ought to have a large sale this county, and the people will fare in better by having it at hand.

Surviving a Severe Throat.
Scientific American.

In 1877 Louis C. Londenski was crossing the mountains in Romania when his party was attacked by robbers. All had their throats cut, but Londenski had only his windpipe severed, his jugular vein being unharmed. As he showed signs of life he was hanged, yet the rope did not strangle him, as he still breathed through the aperture. After a time he was discovered and cut down, when he was removed to Vienna, where Professor Schaefer effected what is almost a cure. From Vienna he traveled around the world, exhibiting himself at different medical colleges. He is at present in Buffalo, N. Y., and Dr. S. H. Warren, after a careful examination, describes his wound as follows:

An incision was made across the throat from the inner side of both jugular veins, which extends to the carotid artery, severing the trachea, or bronchial tubes. Through the orifice can be seen the vocal cords, larynx, and diverging tubes. Londenski, at his pleasure, can show the action of the glottis in respiration—some thing never before beheld by surgeons in a living subject."

The Tribune, in describing the case, states that he breathes through a tube three-eighths of an inch in diameter, which curves downward. He lives mainly on liquid food, being unable to digest gross food. He smokes considerably, having been advised to do so by Prof. Schaefer, exhaling the smoke through the hole in his neck, which is just below the Adam's apple, and in which is a tube that he closes when he wants to speak. The glottis, through disease, has almost closed up.

A French "Barn-Storming" Troupe.

[French Cor. Philadelphia Times.]

It was eight o'clock when I entered the house and already it was full, and so too were a good many of the men. A platform of four planks on trestles, with four oil lamps that gave forth more smoke than light, formed the stage. The female spectators were seated on improvised benches of planks and boxes, which bent under their weight. Behind them were, with one exception, the male spectators, some of them perched on the window-sills. The only orchestra was the sea wind that whistled through many an open space and the breaking of the waves on the golden sand along the beach. The exception I have alluded to was the Maire, who, by virtue of his official rank, had been given a seat in the front row among the handsome ladies. The performance was composed of character dancing, acrobatic feats, slight-of-hand tricks, all flavored with a good deal of horse-play and jokes so old that Shen, Ham and Japhet must have resorted to their use to while away hour away when out in the Ark. To the audience, however, all that the performers did had apparently the flavor of novelty. The married women and the young girls fairly shook from head to foot with laughter. Many of them were quite pretty, with that yellow-brown hair such as is only to be seen on the coast of Normandy, and those downy, tanned cheeks that leave a taste of the salt air on your lips after you have kissed them. More than once did a whole row come to grief as a bench broke down under their excited movements. The laughter was contagious, and the men—fishermen, field laborers, stable boys and waiters, for most part—joined heartily in the shrill shrieks of the girls.

Science "Simplified."
[Dio Lewis' Monthly.]

If you prick a tree it keeps very still; no cry and no wincing. But if you prick a dog, it yelps and jumps. The tree has no nerves; the dog has nerves. This explains why the tree keeps so still, and why the dog makes so much fuss.

A nerve is a white thread running between two different parts of the body. Its function is to carry messages. You pinch the end of a dog's tail. There are white threads running from the ends of a dog's tail to his brain. The message sent over these is the following:

"To HEADQUARTERS IN THE SKULL:

"There is an awful pinching here."

"TIPENDOFTAIL."

When the message reaches the brain and is recorded and considered there, the brain sends back the following message:

"TIPENDOFTAIL Esq.:

"Jerk away from the pinch quick."

"COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF,"

"Headquarters."

The tail is jerked away and everything is lovely again. It is not the same white thread which conveys the pinching message that brings back the jerking message. They look alike, but they are not alike. The one that carries the message from the end of the tail to the brain is called a nerve of feeling, and the white thread which brings back the message from the brain to the tail, commanding it to jerk, is called a nerve of motion.

Makes 'Em Respect a Man.
[Rockland Courier-Gazette.]

"What's this? Dead Scott's decision about?" queried Mrs. Wigglesworth, looking up from the paper. "Dread Scott—not Dead Scott," corrected Mr. Wigglesworth, with a man's patronizing smile of superiority. "Well, Dread Scott, then. What is it?" Mr. Wigglesworth was stuck, but he looked wise. "Something to do with the Mexican war," he explained. "Gen. Scott, you know, was a terrible fighter, and the Greasers got to referring to him as the Dread Scott. Some decision or other he made about a battle is what the papers mean." Mrs. Wigglesworth, with a satisfied air, folded the paper back and turned to see if any new people had been born, while Mr. Wigglesworth winked to himself at having got out of it so smoothly. "All a woman needs," he mentally remarked, "is to have a thing explained one way or another. Don't matter what you tell 'em, so long as it's something. It's a mighty sight easier than having to answer a hundred questions. Makes 'em respect a man, too."

Floating Breakwaters.
[San Francisco Chronicle.]

Floating breakwaters have been adopted in England with good results. The breakwater, or turnwater, consists of a line of buoys of triangular shape, with a sharp point towards the sea and two concave sides. The buoys are moored independent of each other by an anchor fore and aft and with a buoy's space between them. They draw ten feet of water and each wave as it meets them is cleaved in two and diverted right and left towards the next buoy. The more violent the sea the more efficient the action of the buoys. It has been demonstrated that it is only the upper ten or fifteen feet of water that needs to be affected, for all below is calm.

An Alabama Wedding.
[Inter Ocean.]

The bridal march was played by Will Corley on a harmonica. The groom was a tall, thin, dark-haired youth, dressed in a hickory stripe shirt and copper-colored pants, and on his arm was gently suspended his bride, like a clear rib side of bacon or bubble of meat.

Thrown from a Horse.

SALT LAKE, Dec. 26.—At Mill Creek, Edward Burch, fourteen years old, started on horseback from a party at Mill Creek to ride to this city for some whisky. An hour afterward his dead body was found at a bridge a few rods from where he started. It is thought the horse stumbled at the bridge and the boy was thrown to the ground with such force as to kill him instantly.

THE procession, yesterday, illustrating Maysville's favorite feature, the hog, was a very successful affair and a capital bit of city hog breeding. The pig was exhibited in all his various employments even to the occasional habit of chasing people up lamp posts. The BULLETIN office was represented, with the press in operation printing anti-hog literature and distributing it among the people, together with many other truthful features of our life among the Maysville hogs.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.
Congressman Townsend's Views on That and sundry other subjects.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—Congressman Townsend was discussing the prospects as to the place of holding the Democratic National Convention. "It seems to lie between St. Louis and Chicago," he said, "though there may be good reasons for Cincinnati's getting it. The Chicago people think they will get it, and of course, as an Illinois man, I am for Chicago. Then, too, I am for Morrison for the nomination, and a convention in his own State, or in St. Louis, which is so near to his district, ought to be of some advantage to him."

"Wouldn't Tilien, if he wanted a renomination, favor St. Louis? The holding of the convention in the same city and same hall where he was nominated before might give the 'old ticket' something of a seal-off, might it not?"

"Yes; and after Colonel Morrison, who is from my own State and my first choice, I should be glad to see the 'old ticket' renominated. I think the people generally would. It would sweep the country, too. Nothing could beat it."

"Do you think that Tilden would accept a renomination?"

"He ought to. I see a good many statements, made by friends of his or alleged friends, but none by himself. Of course he is quoted as saying that he is not a candidate, but that does not necessarily mean that he would refuse the place if tendered him."

THE OHIO BOOMING.

Fears of Another Disastrous Flood at Zanesville.

CINCINNATI, December 26.—The high water in the Ohio causes much uneasiness, and railroads are already serving notices of contingent delays in the delivery of freights. Mills are all much delayed and street traffic greatly impeded by the accumulation of slush and snow, particularly at the crossings. Reports from up the river and from all tributaries in the vicinity, are that a heavy volume of water is coming, and there are grave fears of a repetition of the scenes of February last. All possible precautions are being taken to protect life and property.

Five Persons Drowned.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Dec. 26.—A private letter received from Logan County gives particulars of a melancholy accident which occurred near Paris. A family named Gray, said to have been from Illinois, consisting of a man, his wife and child and two middle-aged ladies, were moving to Arkansas. They were in a covered wagon and attempted to cross a creek. The stream was swollen by the recent rains, and in the center the wagon was overturned. There being no one at hand, the people were swept away and drowned.

The Glass Blowers' Troubles.

PITTSBURGH, December 26.—It is not believed a conference between Campbell & Co., the glass manufacturers, and their workmen will take place. Campbell in a card admits that he did say he would favor and vote for a resumption of work, for wages of $5 and $7 a day guaranteed to single blowers, but to entitle the men to this guarantee the latter must guarantee to make fifty to fifty-five boxes per week. If they fail they are to be paid the regular wages list, less than the proposed reduction. It is thought the men will agree to this.

The Earthquakes in Portugal.

LISBON, Dec. 26.—There were two earthquakes on Saturday. The first was not generally noticed, but the second lasted twelve seconds, being accompanied by heavy rumblings, awaking the population, and causing a panic. Some damage was done old buildings and chimneys. At Setubal, eighteen miles southeast, the shock was so severe that many of the inhabitants rushed to the seashore.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Mr. Roger A. Pryor has authorized a reporter to say that he had not, as rumored, received $15,000 less out of the fund raised for O'Donnell's defense. He said that his fees amounted to considerably less than that.

Irish Colonization for South America.

Buenos Ayres, via Galveston, December 26.—Callan, a member of the British Parliament, is here. It is believed his object is to introduce Irish colonization into this country.

DR. R. J. KENDALL & CO., GENEVA.—I feel it a duty to others suffering with the piles to tell of the results to write to you. I have had the piles and prolapsoe of the rectum for five years, for the past three years I have suffered the most agonizing pain. I tried everything without success until I took a dose of Kendall's Spavin Cure. I have not seen or heard of the piles since. One who has not suffered as I have cannot comprehend the great joy that I felt at being cured of a disease almost worse than death. I had a valuable library of books on the subject, and had a doctor on his breast bone. I tried all kinds of home remedies, and had it cut open without any benefit. Saw your advertisement and bought a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and ordered my teamster to use as directed. In less than one month the piles were gone. Thinking that a liniment that would do what Kendall's Spavin Cure has done for my horse might benefit more. I tried it as a last resort. With gratitude and best wishes for your audience, I am faithfully yours, J. H. GLENN.
